

IT
SD

HUB

Career Profile:

Fisheries Guardian

Are you interested in safeguarding aquatic and marine resources and ensuring the sustainable management of fisheries in your community?

This career might be for you!

What is a Fisheries Guardian?

Fisheries Guardians are the eyes and ears of their community. They ensure that resources are managed sustainably, enforce rules and regulations, and implement communities' land and marine use agreements.

Did you know that your existing skills, experience, and knowledge could qualify you for a role as a fisheries guardian?

You can use these strengths to start a new and exciting career in this area.

Your Indigenous Knowledge

- Indigenous Knowledge for sustainable stewardship and resource management
- community connections and shared responsibility

Your Experience

- mentorships
- community-led projects
- compliance-related roles
- on-the-ground fisheries fieldwork and monitoring

Your Skills

- documenting incidents, observations, and data
- communicating and engaging with community members
- applying knowledge of marine and land use agreements

Your Education + Community-Based Training

- relevant courses
- certifications or official designation in fisheries compliance or management
- community-led programs

For a complete career profile, including courses and certifications, visit ITSDhub.ca/resources

To learn about community-based training, connect with us at info@itsdhub.ca

Indigenous Training +
Skills Development
Formation +
Perfectionnement Des
Compétences Autochtones

NATIONAL INDIGENOUS
FISHERIES INSTITUTE