

IT
SD

HUB

Career Profile:

Fisheries Technician

Are you passionate about preserving aquatic ecosystems and ensuring sustainable fisheries management within your community?

This career might be for you!

What is a Fisheries Technician?

A fisheries technician manages and conserves aquatic resources.

This work encompasses data collection, habitat restoration, and community education – all aimed at preserving these vital resources for current and future generations.

Did you know that your existing skills, experience, and knowledge could qualify you for a role as a fisheries technician?

You can use these strengths to start a new and exciting career in this area.

Your Indigenous Knowledge

- Traditional Ecological Knowledge about local fish species and relationships in aquatic ecosystems
- community connections and values

Your Skills

- collecting and analyzing data
- operating equipment
- handling fish
- communicating with community members

Your Experience

- internships
- mentorships
- community-led projects
- hands-on fisheries conservation

Your Education + Community-Based Training

- fisheries science courses or certifications
- community-led programs
- safety certification and courses

For a complete career profile, including courses and certifications, visit ITSDhub.ca/resources

To learn about community-based training, connect with us at info@itsdhub.ca

Indigenous Training +
Skills Development
Formation +
Perfectionnement Des
Compétences Autochtones

NATIONAL INDIGENOUS
FISHERIES INSTITUTE